WHAT'S THE POINT?

Every now and again I get a question that surprises me.. you know, the kind of question that requires a pause for serious thought so that when you supply your answer you can not only be clear but also confident. I am a huge fan of provocative questioning because it should lead to critical thinking, and critical thinking leads to an evolution in consciousness. At least that is what I hope for.

So, the gears in my mindset to work searching for a response to what should be a super easy explanation of the purpose of astrology. Like why should you use it, what is the reason and or personal benefit of interpreting an astrological chart? The easy answer is to say that astrology is a lot like weather. When you watch the nightly news or tap an app to see what the forecast is, you are basically Basically my dear Mystic the conversation I was having swirled around not just the validity of astrology, but instead the application. The question was... “even if astrology is real; what is it good for”? Well, clutch my pearls, until that very moment and that very question I had mistakenly assumed that anyone and everyone who had an even passing interest in the wandering stars and their effect on humans would inherently know and understand that astrology is more than stargazing for prediction! Well, I learned that that assumption did as assumptions do... made an ass of me.

attempting to look ahead so that you can prepare yourself.

If you know it's going to rain, you can grab an umbrella on the way out. If you know it's going to be warm and sunny you know to wear clothes that are light and breathable.

Likewise, if you know that the forecast promises extreme weather conditions, then you know you may need to prepare for difficult conditions.

While it's easy to argue that you don't really need a weather report to see what's coming, you can also probably agree that having one is a little more than helpful.

Imagine if you lived in an area where tornadoes happen, you know that there are certain times of the year when tornados are more likely. You also know that they can be enormously destructive and even deadly if they are strong enough.

Like most of us in the modern world, you may rely on the internet, T.V. or even radio to forewarn you that a tornado is coming. You may even secure your home, pack up supplies or even evacuate depending on what you choose to do with what the weather person says.

Over time, and repeatedly successful forecasting, we have all been conditioned (and rightfully so) to trust our favourite forecaster and the technology used to predict the weather.

In fact, if you really stop and think about it, the vast majority of us have literally less than zero understanding of the technology used to forecast weather and yet we trust it. At the very least we trust it to help us decide how we are going to plan our day, and how we will protect our lives at the very most. Forecasting the weather is valuable and some might even say vital to preserving our way of life.

So this is how I would say astrology is useful and valuable to our lives; we can and do benefit from astrology because it is a tool that empowers us to navigate in life much easier.

Through thousands of years and countless hours of observing astrological patterns and their effect on human affairs, a respectable percentage of accuracy can be afforded to astrology. All one needs to do is watch and see.

Even if you don't choose to become an astrologer, or care to learn the details of how it works, you can still benefit.

I have to quote Claudius Ptolemy who was a polymath and astrologer who lived in the second century AD, he said:

"It is clearly evident that most events of a widespread nature draw their causes from the enveloping heavens."

Meaning that through centuries of observation, patterns of astrological "weather" a correspondence has been drawn between the movements of the heavenly bodies and the events and conditions on earth. Therefore it is pretty easy to draw the conclusion that what happens on earth is "written" in the stars. This of course will likely generate a new line of questioning - Does that mean that our fates are sealed? What about free will? What about destiny? Do we have the ability to change a prediction?

So, to me, this is where the conversation always comes alive! I love to explore these ideas and concepts and their impact on our experiences as human beings.

I personally think the way it works is sort of a combination of several factors... not least of which being the purpose for which a soul chooses an incarnation. In other words, I believe that our lives are affected by the conditions of our environment and to some extent, our environment is predetermined before we incarnate so that it will be the most conducive to our learning and refinement.

Our creator works in concert with your environment, your individual soul, your collective membership in Creation and, of course, your "personal lesson plan" to facilitate experiences that initiate, compel and/or complete an increment of your individual and collective evolution.

So dear Mystic, If you can agree that we are all in this together... that everything is connected to everything else without exception, then you can easily understand that whatever I do, will directly or indirectly reverberate into your experience. Likewise, whatever you do, say, feel or think will ripple into my experience.

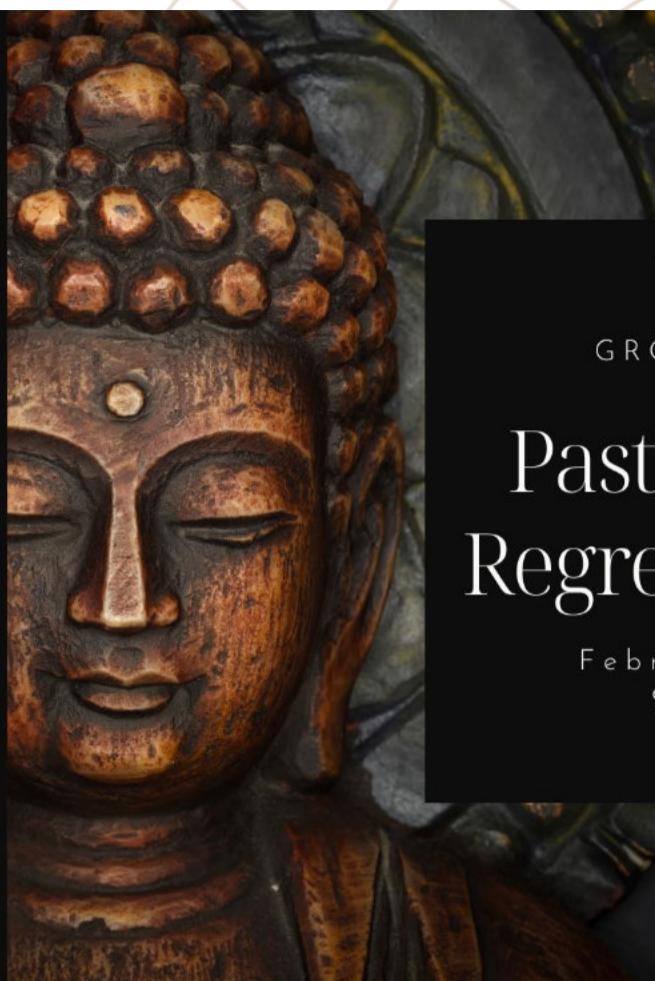

So in a weird sort of way, astrology is a tool with which we can observe the forces and influences at work that impact our lives. The influence a planet gives is filtered through the sign it is in, and then is further empowered by the way the planets are configured in aspect to each other. These relationships are synthesized and interpreted by an astrologer... someone who learns the meanings of all the pieces and can then order them together in a cohesive and practical way which then can be offered to anyone who wishes to plan according to the "weather".

Then, based on what is observed in the nature of these relationships and their implied influence, we can then decide how we may best act with or against these forces.

Like I mentioned before... if the weather person says it's going to rain... do you bring an umbrella with you to the park even if it's currently sunny outside, or do you go without? Either way, the destination is the same even if the path you take is unique.

GROUP PAST LIFE REGRESSION

Your Soul exists on a continuum of consciousness. Before you choose a body, a place to live, parents, family, friends, and experience, you review your past lives in order to create an opportunity to evolve to a higher, more refined expression of your essential self.

Observe memories of the experiences, events, and relationships that are embedded in the memory banks of the soul. Past life regression powerfully reveals the secrets of your soul's experiences through your many incarnations. At the end of the regression, you will be invited to take part in a healing practice to help extinguish any ties from the past that inhibit you today!

Clarify Your Karmic Path - Understand the nature of the Karmic Path you are on in this lifetime through regressing to the deep past of your soul's memories. Observe and understand the impact of the events of one of your past lives, which influences your responses to events.

Places, Near & Far - Your incarnations have happened all over the landscape of the universe! Your soul is reborn into the physical world in a myriad of ways, which allows your consciousness to explore the many unique ways you can experience life. You might be surprised to discover all the wonders and ways in which you have lived!

Soul Contracts - In each incarnation you have you arrive into the physical world with an agenda, lessons you will learn. The lessons you will learn are facilitated not only through the people you know but the places you've been and the experiences you have. All of these result in refining the quality of your spirit. Each of us has a soul contract to fulfill, discover yours!

Soul Groups - What fun would physical life be if we did it all alone? Your soul has, and will, always manifest into the physical world with other familiar spirits. Each soul plays a different role within the group, interacting with you, helping you grow. See who you choose to book this lifetime with and how you travelled together in past lives!

Dumortierite

Blue has always been one of my favourite colours. I find it soothing, and it makes me feel a combination of creativity and deep relaxation. Ao, it's no surprise that I have fallen truly, madly, deeply in love with dumortierite. This is a truly fascinating crystal, as it empowers those who use it with the ability to advocate for their needs with directness and purpose. However, it also helps you to stay calm and focused so that your emotions don't overwhelm your good sense. Dumortierite is also praised for its ability to enhance your intellectual abilities making it a favourite of those needing to process large amounts of information. Needless to say I have a beautiful little chunk on my desk to help me when I'm teaching or doing astrological readings, as I find it indispensable for helping me to find the right words when interpreting symbols and describing concepts.

As a healer, dumortierite is excellent for stimulating the Throat chakra, as it can help a person to speak up for themselves or to express their personal truth more clearly. It can be a perfect choice for inner child work, soul retrieval and of course reiki! Dumortierite is also helpful for supporting subtle energies. It is especially good for soothing psychic fatigue. Readers and energy workers will find dumortierite especially helpful.

Interestingly, dumortierite is often mistaken for lapis lazuli and even sodalite because of its blue colouring. It can sometimes be used in place of lapis because of its similar appearance. It is even used in the creation of high-grade porcelain - pretty cool if you ask me!

Named after the French paleontologist Dumortier, these crystals are found in Madagascar, Namibia, Sri Lanka, Canada, Poland, France, Brazil and the United States.

ROSES

HERBAL ALLIES - ALLI ALIS

Roses are often associated with Valentine's Day.

Many mythological tales surround these stunning flowers, most of them ending in death.

How romantic.

In this story from Greek Mythology, we not only see the creation of the red rose but the windflower as well.

Aphrodite, the goddess of love and beauty, took Adonis, a mortal, as her lover. They became inseparable. Ares, the god of war, another one of Aphrodite's lovers, became jealous. Adonis enjoyed hunting wild beasts. Ares knew this and sent a wild boar after Adonis during a hunt. Adonis speared the wild boar. The boar charged at him and gored him in the groin. Aphrodite heard of Ares' plan and ran to warn Adonis. She tore her ankle on the thorns of a nearby white rose bush as she ran, her blood turning the white flowers red. Alas, she arrived too late; Adonis lay bleeding out. Aphrodite draped herself over Adonis' dying body and wept. Her tears mixed with his blood and soaked the Earth beneath where they lay. Windflowers began to grow in that very spot, a memorial of their love.

Roses have a long history of use in herbalism all over the world. The blossoms have been used as a reproductive restorative, to ease breast tenderness, menstrual pain, and for liver support. Applied topically, rose works well as an additive to many moisturizers and beauty products.

Magically speaking, roses are often associated with love, self-love, protection and happiness.

Parkers Astrology

I have but a nearly offensive number of astrological texts over the years, and there isn't an ounce of regret in my body about it either! I'd like to take a moment to introduce you to one of the very first books I added to my collection, and I can't recommend it enough for those of you who are itching to get your astrological bearings.

Written by Derek & Julia Parker, husband and wife team and co-authors, Parker's Astrology is a great primer for astrological concepts. The book contains all of the fundamentals of astrological charting. For the casual reader or Astro enthusiast, the contents of the book are rewarding and satisfying. There is ample and simple to understand and apply conceptual astrological guidance. The reader will get a good primer for how astrology "works" with descriptions of meanings associated with the planets, signs, aspects and houses. It does introduce some interpretive principles and what is often referred to as "cookbook" delineations for certain planet/sign/house/ aspect combinations which will whet the appetite for more in-depth interpretations of horoscopic astrology.

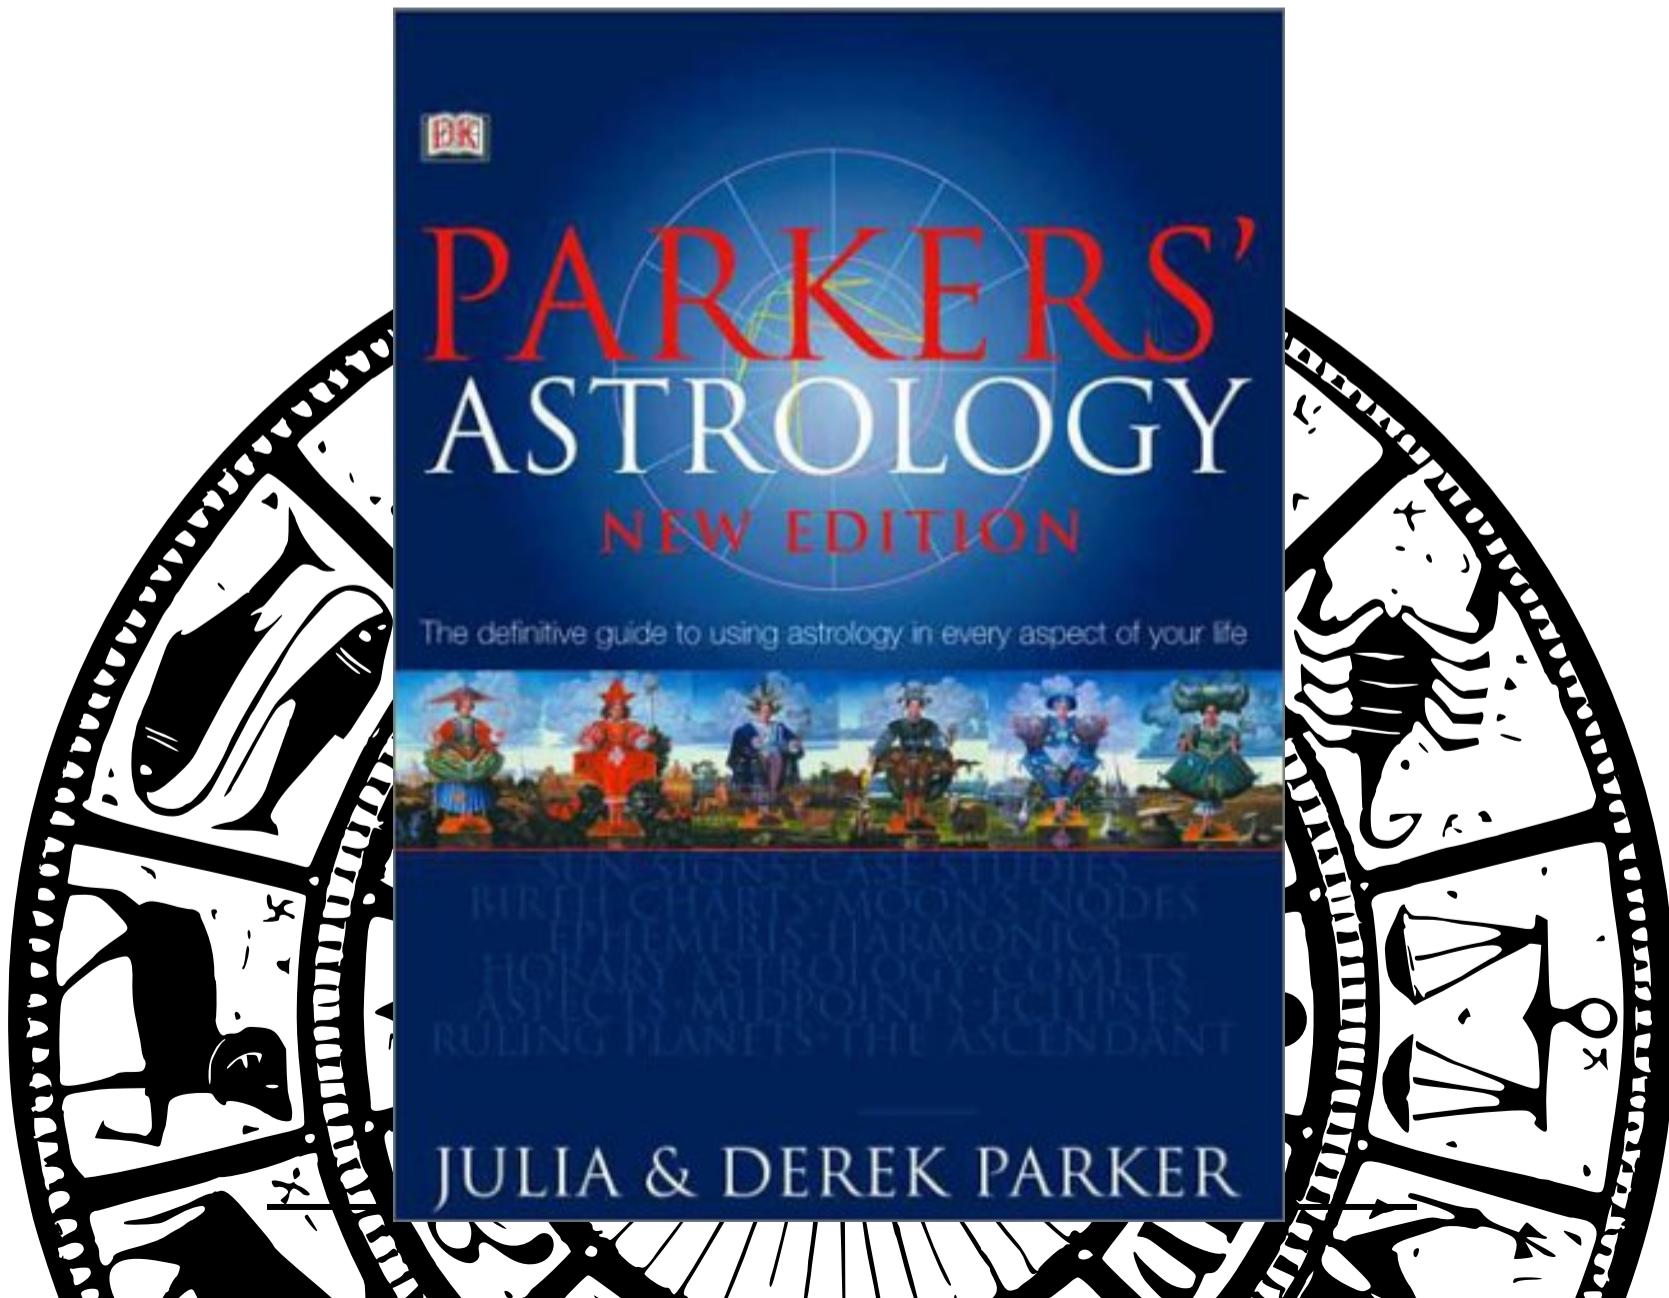

The illustrations are nothing less than beautiful which makes reading the book a sensory indulgence. These illustrations include sample charts that the reader can study to further understand the concepts and treatments given to certain techniques.

This book is most definitely aimed at the beginner astrologer or the curious novice as it lacks any real depth as it would apply to chart synthesis, or more advanced timing or predictive techniques. I don't count that as a strike against this book because this book's intention is to give the reader a strong sense of what they are in for as aspiring astrologers. It's a great starter and I'm happy I bought it early in my practice.

The book also boasts tables for calculations and a bit of an ephemeris. These are both essential tools for anyone to become familiarized with as they venture further into the tradition of western modern astrology.

I honestly don't have any complaints about this book and I couldn't give it a higher recommendation.

FEBRUARY 3 RUNE CAST

Let's have a mocha this time. February is a wild month. It's bone-chillingly beautiful. It also has Valentine's Day, Groundhog Day and my birthday.

I'll throw a few Elder Futhark Runes and see what they have to say.

differently each time it comes up. Is it a heritage we were born into? Something you embraced or made your own? Or something you've turned away from? What sort of heritage are you building? What kind of mark will you leave behind?

Eihaz was the Yew tree to the ancient Germanic people who wrote the Elder Futhark Runes. Each rune has a duality, sometimes soft, sometimes quite sharp. The Yew tree is an excellent example of that for one another and are often seen as a proud symbol of strength. But not just the strength of one, the strength of a herd, family or tribe.

Wild, right? So, Othala, Eihaz and Uruz. Sum them up in a sentence or two. Maybe February's a month to look more at our perception rather than how we're perceived. Put how you want to be seen aside, and look inside to see what you're living for. What motivates you? Are you balancing it? There are tough times,

I see Othala, Eihaz, and Uruz in a nice line. Heritage, the Yew tree and the Aurochs. Yep, Wild; this is pretty complex. It's three very complicated things, so it has to be. I'll break them down a bit, one at a time.

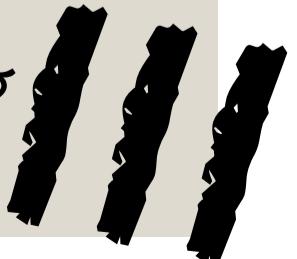

Othala means something like heritage, inheritance or lineage. I really like the runes that symbolize concepts. Othala is a great example. Everyone has their definition, thoughts and emotions attached to the word heritage; this means everyone reads it differently. They may even read it duality. It is stunning and equally poisonous, but a skillful alchemist can distill medicine from the bark and berries. A talented woodworker can create beautiful furniture and melodic instruments or a mighty longbow from it. Life, death and art all growing together in a massive, ancient tree.

Uruz was the Aurochs, a massive, untamable beast. Julius Caesar said they looked like a bull but were about the size of an elephant. These impressive stalwart creatures lived together in herds. They looked out and balance is next to impossible for most of us, but are we working toward it? Are we happy with the progress? How could we do better? How can we find motivation and balance and use it to benefit not only ourselves but also our friends and family? It's a process, but we work at it. We forge our path. We strive for balance, and we defend and nurture each other.

SIMPLY SYMBOLS

Pisces

Possibly the most psychically sensitive of all of the zodiacal signs, Pisces, the 12th sign of the Zodiac was traditionally ruled by the planet Jupiter which also makes its domicile or home in Pisces. Mercury on the other hand is in its detriment and its fall, whereas Venus meets its exaltation in Pisces.

The word Pisces comes from the Latin plural for fish, and its symbol shows two fish swimming in opposite directions, each with its tail to the nose of its counterpart. Pisces belongs to the water triplicity and is mutable, which underscores its impressionable and flexible nature. It was recognized in Babylonian constellations as Šinunutu, "the great swallow" in current western astrology, Pisces, and Anunitum, "the Lady of Heaven", where the northern fish is. Babylonians also called this constellation "The Tails", picturing two fish swimming in the opposite directions, while representing rivers Euphrates and Tigris. Additionally, Babylonian texts from around 1000 BCE call it "the fish cord or ribbon".

A Greek myth tells the story of Aphrodite and her son Eros who would shape-shift into forms of fish to escape the titan Typhon who had power over the wind. Eros & Aphrodite tied themselves together with a cord in order not to lose each other in the Euphrates river. Symbolically, Pisces people can have a tendency to get stuck, just like fish, they become enmeshed in problems, and situations much like a fish become tangled in a net. Also like a fish, Pisces are extremely sensitive to energy, making them what many consider to be the most empathic of all zodiac signs.

Copper

Burnished reds and warm sunset colours characterize the favoured metal of Venus. Copper has been prized since ancient times for its healing and antiseptic properties. Many ancient cultures knew and valued the healing qualities of copper which included its ability for reducing stiff joints, aches, and pains commonly associated with arthritis and rheumatism. It is also said that Copper can be used to stabilize and balance the flow of blood within the body, helping to increase circulatory functions. As evidenced by its popularity in the modern-day, it hasn't lost its appeal for its use in bracelets, support bandages and even cooking and drink wear. Additionally, copper can be used to cleanse wounds and fight bacterial infections.

In ancient world mythology copper was associated with the goddess Venus/ Aphrodite as copper mirrors were one of her attributes which made copper sacred to her. Historically speaking, copper is believed to be the second metal ever worked by human hands, and the first to be made into tools. For the Aztecs, copper was something they traded for, but it became very important to them as axe-monies.

Limitations

Limitations are illusions Dear Ones, for it is the human form that is implanted in you to hinder you from moving forward. You have all you need to succeed in life, to follow your path of true purpose that we have given to you. You see Dear Ones, limitations are fears, they place limitations on you, your mind thinking that you cannot do this and not move forward.

This is not what we gave to you, understanding you have the ability to make change, seek and you shall find the beauty of life that is unfolded for you to see, to experience, to live.

Limitations are what people put on people, it is a human experience, it is not from us. It is humanity that tries to control and manipulate others into thinking they can not do it.

You each have a key Dear Ones, a key that is connected to the heart. A key that is connected to the soul. Your souls are meant to be here to live, in abundance of all things.

The world is a loving place that humanity at times tries to detour you, to hinder you in moving in the path of enlightenment. In the path of love, of all that you desire.

You see Dear Ones, we walk with you on this earth plane. Even though you may not see us, trust when we say this, we are there right beside you, guiding you. If only you will listen, listen from within.

God has a way of making things happen, if you believe in your path, there will be no obstacles. Only the enlightenment of love. This is why so many suffer because they do not believe, suffer within themselves, thinking they cannot do any better.

God loves each and every one of you with the unconditional love that comes from his heart. He wishes for all of humanity to see this, to feel his love so that each and every one of you may live in abundance of harmony and peace.

We have said this many times, Dear Ones, from the heart it is many things, many layers, it is more than what you know at this time in the physical plane. If only you shall seek, you will find the answers are within. Abundance is available to all of you, it is God's gift to you. No one should go hungry, no one should walk in fear. No one walks alone. For we are with you every step of the way.

We wish for you to see the love of the Heavens, for we wish for it to be the love here, in the physical world. Only then it will change. Limitations can also help you detour into the right path, for when you are at a crossroad. It is to show you another path, for that path is your purpose.

Allow yourself to trust, trust in us for our guidance is key. Looking deep within one self in knowing that you are loved, that you are guided.

Our love for you is unconditional, humanity needs to know this at this time. Your guides, angels surround you all. Some may not believe, but they are still there. Reach out to them, ask them for assistance and guidance.

Once the heart is able to open fully and completely, resistance fades away. We wish to take your hands, walk with you. For the divine love is within you, it is within all of you, all of humanity.

No one has limitations Dear Ones, you each all hold a gift of love. It is the way of seeing joy in all things. When you see and feel joy, it changes things within your own self.

Loving one another, supporting one another as you are not alone in this physical world, as we said before we walk this physical plane with you.

God only wants the best for each and everyone of you, for all of humanity. It is what you think of limitations that hold you back. Walk forward with love. Surrender your fears, for then you shall see the beauty of love unfold. It is within each and every one of you, this is our gift to you .

Avalon Lane Feng Shui

There are people that believe extreme minimalism is the key or basis of Feng Shui. While clearing the clutter is a great start to beginning the practice of Feng Shui, it's important to recognize mess versus clutter.

So - what's the difference between Mess and Clutter?

Feng Shui can be simply described as connecting with our environment. Having a sense of place - feeling comfortable in our homes, creating an energy that makes a house your home. When you're connected in this way it opens many opportunities to live authentically.

Chi is energy ... the energy around us – the energy that impacts how we feel. The energy around us is changing all of the time. We can clearly see this through the moon phases and the change in seasons. Spring cleaning – you know when the air is fresh and clean outside, you instinctively want to open all of the windows. It feels refreshing to get all of the old stale, stagnant energy out of your house. You can breathe easier as it fills with new energy that flows and moves through your home. That is Good Chi and that is an example of how we can feel it.

Clutter can affect this energy in a negative way. Clutter represents an energy block.

I'm sure we are all aware of the impact that clutter can have on our mental health. It's not good.

But if we get too hung up on keeping things clean that can also create anxiety. One of the key things to remember is that there is a huge difference between clutter and mess. Evaluate what is mess and what is clutter. Don't allow your day-to-day messiness create anxiety. Life is messy. For example, when I am writing or in the middle of a project there is a lot of creativity happening and that creativity can sometimes be messy. When you are cooking dinner and have used every dish in the cupboard or when the kids come home from school and scatter their belongings everywhere - there is a positive energy that is held in that mess.

You can feel the difference in the energy between mess and clutter. Messiness has a positive "moving" energy, whereas clutter is a stagnant energy. Stagnant energy is heavy and can be felt when you have stacks of paper in your office. Think of those boxes in your spare bedroom that haven't moved for quite some time. When I need to be creative, I enjoy the energy of the creative mess...and when the project is completed, I generally spend some time getting things back in order before I embark on my next project. If I were to leave everything untidy and scattered for an extended period, the energy becomes stagnant and has the capacity to turn into clutter.

I'm not so sold on the concept of minimalism. If you are too extreme you remove all the energy. Organization "having a place for everything and everything in its place" is critical in being able to remove clutter and enjoy the energy of your messiness when it needs to happen. And messiness needs to happen – life is messy.

Pay attention to your home and how it feels for you – by making it an extension of your energy you can make your house a home. Do things that will make you love it. Think about what you need to do to get the energy moving in your home. If you have a room that you never use, think about why...is it too dark, does the furniture not feel right? Does it need to be painted a different colour? What can you change in that room to make you love it?

But be mindful, if you know something is not right and you just can't quite put your finger on it – consult with a Feng Shui Practitioner and they can help you get the energy moving.
